Go-go gadget battery!

iPod low on juice? Blower all puffed out? Grab a Cellboost charger and save your kit from an untimely power lapse!

Smart, disposable, and infinitely useful, Cellboost snaps onto the end of most mobiles and even couples with iPods to kick your kit into life when you're a million miles from the nearest power socket.

Designed to be as portable as the devices it's powering, there are no trailing wires, and the battery pack clips straight onto the end of whatever it's charging.

It's speedy too. Cellboost says its "quick-charge" protocol can revive a dead battery in about two minutes, so you won't suffer too much downtime before making a call or listening to music again.

Putting on our eco-friendly hats for a second, we have to say that using disposable power sources is bad for the environment, and we'd love to see a rechargeable version of the Cellboost.

In lieu of that wondrous invention however, the battery pack is as green as possible, with no trace of Mercury they can be safely chucked in with normal household waste ready to be tossed into landfill.
